
Email Hacker V3.4.6 Activation Code 46

in the previous release of email hacker, there were two methods to move the email_sieve_proxy_config template setting from one kubernetes cluster to another. the first method was to set the email_sieve_proxy_config environment variable and the second was to specify the --email_sieve_proxy_config flag to oc. the email_sieve_proxy_config setting was set to a value that specified a proxy server to access and forward email. this setting could be set only once per cluster, so if a cluster was migrated to a new kubernetes version and the email_sieve_proxy_config environment variable was set again, that cluster would not have the new proxy settings. this new release addresses this by not setting the email_sieve_proxy_config environment variable, but rather setting the value of the email_sieve_proxy_config flag to oc. the new setting is more flexible and allows for multiple email sieve proxy configurations. this means that if an existing cluster is migrated to a new kubernetes version, then the new cluster will maintain all of the email sieve proxy settings that existed in the previous version. in previous versions of email hacker, the cronjob_targets field of the cronjob_scheduler_config resource did not support the status.phase field. the new version of email hacker now supports the status. in the previous release of email hacker, the cronjob_targets field of the cronjob_scheduler_config resource did not support the status.phase field. the new version of email hacker now supports the status.

when running a custom script when booting from crc.json the exit status of the script is ignored, even when the script fails. this is fixed by asserting if the exit code is 0, which is not expected from a failed deployment. the operatorhub rest api previously returned errors in the statuses collection when attempting to remove a status. an operator attempting to delete a status should use operation status codes 201 and 204 to respond to such requests. (bz#1843502) the azure ad cco creates an external identity for service principal names that start with ops, specifically the opscustom.azurecr.io service, to allow the operator to easily create a new kubernetes service account for you. however, the created ops service has a hardcoded password that can be viewed in the azure cli tool. these credentials were added to the retrievecredentials command for ease of use, but they can be viewed in the tool. (bz#1715447, bz#1703278) the new email_hacks_sieve_config resource file is used to change the configuration of the sieve proxy. previously, the email_hacks_sieve_config resource file was used to define how the sieve proxy was to be installed. it was not possible to change the sieve configuration using the email_hacks_sieve_config resource file. 5ec8ef588b
